Reference Guides Site at the Digital Corps

MUNCIE, Ind. - Students at the Ball State Digital Corps have created Reference Guides, a site addressing technical and project questions for Digital Corps employees.

Students have created nearly 100 articles for Digital Corps employees to reference when they need to brush up on their knowledge. New hires will find the articles particularly helpful as they grow acclimated to the Digital Corps' processes.

“Reference Guides is an important project because it acts as a database of essential Corps information. There are articles that benefit everyone!” says Reference Guides Junior Project Manager Addison Paul.

Digital Corps students can access articles, templates, and case studies about technical information applicable to individual teams and Digital Corps as a whole at <https://reference-guides.azurewebsites.net> to build on their skills and professionalism.

The Digital Corps provides a unique on-campus job for undergraduate and graduate students with aspirations to work in innovative and creative fields. Digital Corps students work on real-world projects in a collaborative environment. They also learn technical and professional skills that supplement the instruction they receive in traditional academic classes. Combined with the high-quality work in their portfolio, Digital Corps students are uniquely situated to impact the professional world upon graduation.
